

HISTORY OF STREET NAMES

VA MEDICAL CENTER

HOUSTON, TEXAS

HENDRICKS TERRACE

Honoring Lieutenant (JG) Lucille Hendricks (NO), U.S.N., of De Leon, Comanche County, Texas. On duty as Chief Nurse of the Dispensary, U.S. Naval Air Station,, Naval Operating Base, Dutch Harbor, Alaska. Lt. Hendricks was killed in a crash of an air transport near Dutch Harbor on 23 April, 1944.

MIXON AVENUE

Honoring Lieutenant Ruben Samuel Mixon (HG), U.S. N. Born Blooming Grove, Texas, later of Dallas, Texas. While attached to Staff Command, Third Fleet, during invasion of Okinawa, and while returning to his ship, the U.S.S. Missouri, his plane was forced down at sea off Amami Island, 28 May, 1945. Surrounded by Japanese torpedo boats, and during transfer to one of these, Lieutenant Mixon helped to capsize and sink the plane. In prison camp at Amami, according to witnesses, he suffered severe beatings because he would not reveal information on movement of U.S. ships. For this reason he was dragged from his cell one night in June, 1945, and executed by a firing squad.

RINGNESS AVENUE

Honoring Lieutenant Henry Raymond Ringness (MC), U.S.N., of Washington, D.C. - Navy Cross posthumously- Trapped in a foxhole at Guadalcanal, 13 October, 1942, he was mortally wounded by the explosion of a Japanese shell, which killed four and wounded four others. Although completely paralyzed in the lower half of his body, he persisted in treating the other wounded, minimizing his own injuries. He died of his wounds three days later.

HEGE DRIVE

Honoring Captain Raymond W. Hege (MC) U.S.N., of San Diego, CA.,- Bronze Star posthumously While attached to the Staff of Commander, First Carrier Task Force, aboard the U.S.S. Eunker Hill, he was mortally wounded on 11 May, 1945, while continuing to direct medical operations aboard that vessel during fire and heavy enemy air attack.

FORSYTHE PLAZA

Honoring Commander Richard M. Forsythe (MO), U.S.N.R., of East Cleveland, Ohio - Navy Cross posthumously

HISTORY OF STREET NAMES

While with the First Marine Division on New Britain, 6 March, 1944, he was mortally wounded while ministering to the injured. He continued to work refusing treatment for himself, until severe pain and exhaustion forced him to cease. He later succumbed to his wounds.

PORRAS PLAZA

Honoring Charles Victor Porras, Jr., Pharmacist's Mate, Third Class, U.S.N.R., of Los Angeles, CA - Navy Cross posthumously
While serving with the First Marine Division on Peleliu, on 22 September, 1944, he proceeded far in advance of his own lines to evacuate casualties in a reconnaissance patrol. He had brought back four wounded men, unaided, before he himself was fatally struck down by a burst of enemy fire.

GATE TERRACE

Honoring Lieutenant James Stewart Gate (DG) U.S.N.R., of Baker, Oregon - Bronze Star posthumously
While attached to Twenty-third Marines, Fourth Marine Division, during action on Saipan and Tinian Islands, from 15 June to 25 July, 1944, he voluntarily accompanied the Regimental Medical Section in extremely hazardous operations. Lieutenant Gate repeatedly went to the aid of wounded despite peril of intense artillery and mortar fire, and treated and evacuated stricken men with heroic disregard for his own personal safety until he himself was mortally wounded.

SHIELDS AVENUE

Honoring Ellis H. Shields, Chief Pharmacist's Mate, U.S.N.R., of Muscatine, Iowa - Navy Cross posthumously
As a member of the 40th Construction Battalion (Seabees), during the invasion of the Admiralty Islands, in August, 1944, he left his foxhole against orders to give aid to the wounded. He was killed by enemy fire while returning after having given treatment to several wounded.

LFE AVENUE

Honoring James L. Lee, Jr., Pharmacist's Mate, Third Class, U.S.N.R., of Round Rock, Texas - Navy Cross Posthumously
While serving with the U.S. Marines at the battle of Piva Forks, Bougainville, in June, 1944, he disregarded warnings that he faced certain death and heroically braved intense enemy fire to reach an injured marine. Struck by bullets almost immediately, he dragged himself to the side of the wounded man and was administering first aid when both he and his patient were killed by machine gun fire.

PILEWSKI CIRCLE

Honoring George Stanley Pilewski, Hospital Apprentice, First Class, of Dickson, Pa. - Navy Cross posthumously
While serving aboard the U.S.S. Savannah during the invasion of Italy on 11 September, 1943, following an explosion in a gun turret, he risked his life to enter the burning turret. He heroically continued to evacuate wounded and dying men until overcome and suffocated himself by fumes and noxious gases.

HISTORY OF STREET NAMES

MESSER ROAD

Honoring John Albert Messer. Jr.. Pharmacist's Mate. First Class. of Picher. Oklahoma - Navy Cross posthumously

While serving with a Marine Artillery Battalion during the invasion of Saipan, in July 1944, his position was overrun by the enemy. He volunteered to penetrate Japanese lines and evacuate casualties. After he had recovered numerous wounded men under severe fire, he was mortally wounded by a Japanese sniper bullet.

COLGAN TERRACE

Honoring William Winfield Colgan, Pharmacist's Mate, Second Class, U.S.N.R., of Cartaret, N.J. - Navy Cross posthumously

While serving with the First Marine Division at Peleliu, on 4 October, 1944, he immediately proceeded far in front of his own lines to administer first aid to casualties. When American troops were forced to withdraw, he directed the men to take cover until a smoke screen was lowered. He then skillfully supervised evacuation of the wounded until he was fatally struck by Japanese fire.

Le CAPTAIN AVENUE

Honoring Bernard Le Captain, Pharmacist's Mate, Second Class, U.S.N.R., of Glen Fora, WI. -Navy Cross posthumously

While serving with the Third Marine Division during the battle for Fonte Hill, Guam, Mariannas Islands, on 25 July, 1944, he repeatedly risked his life to minister to the wounded. Struck by enemy fire and severely and painfully wounded himself, he continued to care for patients under his care until he collapsed and succumbed.